

CONDITIONAL SENTENCES

ZERO CONDITIONAL

These sentences refer to “all time”, not just the present or future. They express a situation that is always true. If means when or whenever.

It is used to talk about habits and general truths, or scientific facts, things which always happen under certain conditions:

- General truth and scientific facts:
If air expands, it becomes lighter.
- Habits, things that happen again and again:
If I fly, I never eat before the flight.

If + Present Simple	Present Simple
If you press the button,	the machine starts to work
If you have a microwave,	you cook more quickly.
If + Present Simple	Imperative
If the seat belt light is on,	don't leave your seat.

This kind of conditional is used to describe general truths, including scientific processes.

1. Complete the following:

- a. If you lower the temperature of water, it eventually _____
- b. Wood floats if you _____
- c. If water is heated, it _____
- d. If you strike a match, it _____
- e. Plants die if you _____
- f. You put on weight if you _____

- | | |
|---------------------|---------------------|
| 1. don't water them | 5. freezes |
| 2. lights | 6. drop it in water |
| 3. eat too much | |
| 4. boils | |

This kind of conditional can also be used to give instructions.

2. Match the if-clauses in Column A with the correct imperative from Column B, and revise your phrasal verbs.

Column A

1. If you make a mistake,
2. If your car runs out of petrol,
3. If you're not ready for your driving test,
4. If you see an interesting recipe in a magazine,
5. If you receive the application form,
6. If you have finished with his pen,
7. If you can't remember the phone number,
8. If the meat is too big to go in the pan,
9. If you get another frightening letter,
10. If the tree is in danger of falling,

Column B

- a. tear it out
- b. cut it down
- c. give it back
- d. cut it up
- e. rub it out
- f. put it off
- g. tear it up
- h. fill it up
- i. fill it in
- j. look it up

FIRST CONDITIONAL

First Conditional sentences express a possible condition and its probable result in the future.

If + Present Simple	Will + Infinitive
If I find your wallet,	I'll let you know.
If there isn't a hotel,	where will you stay?

Change in the order of the clauses:

Will + Infinitive	If + Present Simple
You won't pass the exam	if you don't revise.
What will you do	if you don't find a job?

When the if-clause is at the beginning of the sentence is separated by a comma, when the main clause (will- clause) is at the beginning there is no comma.

We can also use the present continuous, present perfect or modals instead of the present simple in the If-clause, and a modal verb, the imperative or be going to in the main clause.

If Clause	Main Clause
(modal) If you can find my wallet,	I'll buy you an ice-cream (future simple)
(present perfect) If you have finished eating,	I'll take your plate away.(future simple)
(present simple) If you go shopping,	get some apples.(imperative)
(present continuous) If you are revising for your exams,	I won't disturb you (future simple)
(present simple) if he doesn't take care,	he is going to have an accident.(be going to)

We can change the order of the clauses. Pay attention to the comma.

Main Clause	If Clause
You can sit here	if you want.

• Note : We can use unless (a menos que) instead of If not.
(Unless indica una excepción a lo que se dice)
I won't go to the party unless you come too.

SECOND TYPE

- We use the Second Conditional to express an unreal situation and its probable result. The situation or condition is improbable, imaginary, or contrary to facts. It is used to talk about hypothetical or improbable situations in the present and future.

We also use this type to give advice, talk about ambitions and future expectations.

If I were the President, I wouldn't increase taxation. (but it is not very likely that I will ever be the president)

If you didn't listen to music, you would study better.

- Other modal verbs are possible in the result clause.

Conditional Clause If + Past Simple	Result Clause Would /could / might /should + Infinitive
If I won some money,	I would go round the world.
If I were* rich,	I wouldn't work.
If I saved a little every week,	I might be able to save up for a car.
Result Clause Would /could / might /should + Infinitive	Conditional Clause If + Past Simple
I could buy some new clothes	If I had some money.

- were can be used instead of was on the first and third person singular. In formal English is more common the use of were for all persons, but in informal English it is common the normal use of the verb to be in the past (I was, you were, he was..)

If I were you, I'd..... is used to give advice. In this expression we cannot change were for was.

If I were you, I'd apologise to her.

~~If I was you, I'd apologise to her.~~

- Note that when we use could and might instead of would is to indicate less certainty about a situation.

If I knew her phone number, I could/might call her.

First or second conditional?

Both conditionals refer to the present and future. The difference is about probability, not time. It is usually clear which conditional to use. First conditional sentences are real and possible; second conditional sentences express situations that will probably never happen.

If I lose my job, I'll.....(there is a strong possibility of being made redundant)

If I lost my job, I'd.....(I'm just speculating)

1. Choose the correct answer
