

DESCRIBING PICTURES

Both pictures show a café scene in the evening. The picture at the top is “Nighthawks” by Edward Hopper and the picture at the bottom is a photo remaking the scene.

The painting by Hopper presents a scene at a café in the evening or at night in a city. There is a big window in the foreground, we can see four people in the café. There are three customers and a waiter. The café is on the right. It is full of light. There are three men and a woman. The waiter is wearing a white uniform and a white cap. The woman has long red hair and she ’s wearing a red dress. The other two men are wearing dark suits and hats. All of them are sitting except the waiter. In the background we can see the street and a building in the dark. At the top of the painting we can read the name of the café.

The photo is very similar, the café is on the right and the street is on the left. There is also a big window and there are some people in it. There isn’t a waiter, only customers. All of them are sitting. It is also full of light inside the café and it’s a bit dark outside. Only one customer is looking outside the café. He ’s wearing a white jacket and he ’s got dark hair. The other two are with their backs towards us*. The man on the right is wearing a red jacket and the one on the left is wearing a hat. It’s not clear if they are a man and a woman. The name of the café is not at the top of the building, it is on the window. There are also some cars parked in the street on the left.
